1. Background and General Description

Bangladesh is a country of about 160 million people with a population density 1142/sq.km. Country's economy is not big and developed enough to support such a gigantic population. The vast majority of this population is in rural areas and depend on agriculture for their livelihoods thus the agricultural development and sustainable rural water resources management are critical for socio economic development of the country. In this context, it is important for farmers to increase water use efficiency and improve agricultural water management, while preserving aquatic ecosystems.

It is noted that, due to the lack of adequate drainage systems, farmlands remain submerged for a long time after a flood and rainy season, causing serious damage to agricultural production. On the other hand during the dry season, farming output is decreased by as much as 30% due to drought. In light of these conditions, it is essential to develop sustainable management of water resources for agriculture by providing adequate water management infrastructure in order to reduce waterlogging, flood management and drainage, and water conservation in line with, Bangladesh Water Act, National Water Policy, National water Management Plan and Guidelines for Participatory Water Management.

Local Government Engineering Department (LGED) got involvement in agricultural invention through surface water management that includes water conservation (WC); drainage improvement (DI); flood management (FM); command area development (CAD) and WMCA office for institutional development. This intervention increases agricultural and fish production through institutionalization of stakeholders for ecological and viable water resources management. Since 1995 LGED implemented about 800 stake-holders driven sub project but still, there is a huge demand all over the country. Barisal, Khulna division is under threat of salinity intrusion; Rajshahi is under threat of drought. To solve irrigation and drinking demand, 3 hill districts is included. Additionally, it is needed to be rehabilitated and enhancement of previously completed subproject to make it fully functioning as well as increasing command area. It is expected that the project will help in achieving the goal of 7th FYP and SDG.
